

STEM

Science, Technology, Engineering & Math

It's more important than ever for students to be equipped with the knowledge and skills to solve tough problems, gather and evaluate evidence and make sense of information. These are the types of skills students learn by studying science, technology, engineering and math — subjects collectively known as STEM.

STEM + Art =

STEAM is poised to transform our economy in the 21st century just as science and technology did in the last century. This movement is championed by Rhode Island School of Design and widely adopted by institutions, corporations and individuals.
